CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

AT a Meeting of Fellmongers, Woolsorters, and others unfavourable to Chinese immigration to this colony, held at Mr. Hulle's, Shipman's Hotel, George-street, on Monday evening, November the 5th, Mr. W. C. Forbes in the chair, the following resolutions were unanimously agreed to:
1. "That this meeting views with horror and regret the introduction into this colony of Chinese labour to compete with the British labourers who are daily being brought to our shores in such vast numbers, and that in order to meet this unfair and unequal competition, which will eventually overwhelm the workman and his family in starvation, and plunge the country into pauperism and crime, it is desirable that an association of the working classes should be formed for the protection of their own interests."
2. "That while this system of foreign immigration is carried on to so flagrant an extent, those mechanics and artizans who are possessed of the means will continue to abandon the colony, taking with them their capital, which in the opinion of this meeting will be highly injurious to the best interests of this colony; and it is therefore desirable that this nefarious system of immigration should be reprobated and exposed."
3. "That this meeting is of opinion that the system of immigration alluded to in the foregoing resolution will in the end prove injurious to the interest of the employer; whilst if it is persisted in, the British labourer would be deprived of the means of subsistence; and thousands, who by false representations have been induced to emigrate to this colony, would be reduced to the lowest state of beggary and degradation."
4. "That in the opinion of this meeting the men who were discharged by Mr. Barker for refusing to instruct the Chinamen employed by him in their trade, have pursued a praiseworthy and independent course, and are entitled to the thanks of all their fellow-workers; and that such thanks are hereby tendered to them."
5. "That in order to carry out the object expressed in the first resolution, a committee consisting of be now appointed to draw up rules and regulations for the guidance of such an association, and that they be empowered to call another meeting when such rules, &c., shall have been prepared."
WILLIAM CLIFFE FORBES,

CAUTION! BEWARE!!

THE undersigned particularly directs the attention of parties purchasing HOLLOWAY'S MEDICINES, to the fact that he has every reason to believe, some unprincipled persons are still vending spurious articles as Holloway's Pills and Ointment, and that they are especially active in the Moreton Bay District, and the adjacent colonies. He publishes therefore for the guidance of the public, the following list of persons who are supplied by him with the Medicines; and most particularly urges upon consumers the necessity of never returning the pots or boxes; and especially cautions them to avoid again buying from any vendor who may ask for them back. They can only be wanted to be filled up again with spurious rubbish; the better plan will be to destroy the pots and boxes as soon as the contents are used.

RUM! RUM! RUM!

REAL COLONIAL RUM, 28 O.P. OR 1 TO 2.

NOTICE TO THE TRADE.

THE undersigned begs to call the attention of all parties engaged in the Spirit Trade to his unrivalled stock of Rum, which for flavour colour, and quality, far surpasses any other in the market.
A great deal of East India Spirit—a very inferior article indeed—is most shamefully palmed upon country dealers as colonial produce, and the issue of such 'vile stuff,' if it leads not to the loss of many old customers, creates the utmost dissatisfaction amongst them. To prevent disappointment in procuring the genuine article, parties are requested to communicate their orders direct to Henry Fisher, Distiller, 287, George street, Sydney.

OUR FUTURE LAND POLICY.

WHILE every right-minded colonist must rejoice at the sudden change recently announced as to have taken place in the views of HER MAJESTY'S Government on the Crown Land question, he will not be insensible of the fact that the question is still beset with many formidable difficulties. Some of these difficulties are the offspring of circumstances peculiar to the country; others have been called into existence, or greatly magnified, by indiscreet legislation. Had the Imperial Parliament not interfered, but from the first left the disposition of our waste lands to the wisdom of the local legislature, the difficulties of the first class would probably have been surmounted long ago. As it is, there is a complexity of interests and a confliction of claims which the wisest of our legislators can scarcely contemplate without dismay. It is by no means improbable that the task of adjusting these complications has been relinquished by Ministers in sheer despair, and that they have resolved on casting its responsibilities upon the Australian Assembly, simply because they feel themselves unable to grapple with the exigency. Finding that their attempts to neutralize the errors of the Land Sales Act, by means of what they considered the liberal boons conceded by the Order in Council, have utterly failed to satisfy the colonists, or to place our land policy upon a sound and durable footing; finding that the order has itself produced a ferment in our Legislative Council, and is denounced by many honorable members as a consummation of the ruin which the Act had only threatened; finding, in short, that all attempts to remedy their original blunder have only plunged them into fresh perplexities, they have prudently determined to cut the matter short by leaving the colonists to shift for themselves.

And how will the colonists proceed? What course will they pursue in order to rectify existing errors, and to do justice to all the parties for whose interests they will be called upon to legislate? Let us suppose the time for action to have arrived. Let us suppose the General Assembly of Australia to have met, armed with plenary powers over the waste lands of the united provinces. Representing the four colonies of New South Wales, Van Diemen's Land, South Australia, and Victoria, the Assembly has to settle the terms and conditions upon which the soil of its respective territories shall be disposed of. The first question to which its members must address themselves will probably be, whether a uniform system shall be laid down for all the colonies, or whether each shall have a system of its own. Perhaps Van Diemen's Land and South Australia, where the soil has been chiefly employed for agricultural purposes, and where the anomalies of squatting are comparatively unknown, must be dealt with on principles somewhat different from those on which it will be found necessary to deal with their north-eastern neighbours. It may be found expedient to fix upon their lands a higher minimum price than those of the other colonies could bear; and it may be found inexpedient to make provision for that wholesale scheme of licensed and leasehold occupancy by which the broad acres of the other colonies have been so fearfully locked up. Into these questions, however, we need not enter. The honorable members representing the southern colonies will be best able to discuss and to decide them aright.

Our anxiety centers in the more perplexing enquiries suggested by the anomalies of our squatting system. With all its anomalies, that system has obtained amongst us a firm footing, and its continuance for a long series of years is guaranteed by the plighted faith of the Crown. It is not unlikely that our new Constitution-Act will contain a proviso that all vested rights under the Order in Council shall remain untouched. And even should no such proviso be made, the General Assembly would never be so unjust as to disturb those rights. The leasehold squatters have therefore nothing to fear, so far at least as regards the benefits which their leases literally assure to them. The area comprised within the boundaries set forth in those instruments will be left to the peaceable and undisturbed occupancy of the lessees, on the conditions and for the term of years which the instrument stipulates.

But we apprehend that while, under these new local powers, the squatters will have all that their bond contains, they will have nothing more. The Assembly will not feel itself bound to give one scruple beyond the pound of flesh. There will be an end to those visions of perpetual occupancy and virtual freeholds of inheritance in which many of the squatters have permitted their imaginations to luxuriate, and which some of their adversaries have bewailed as portentous of ruin to the country. Taking it for granted that the Assembly will represent the general feeling of the community, and will not permit class interests to override the interests of the whole, the expiry of the leases will be the signal for reclaiming to the state all the rights theretofore vested in the lessees. It will not necessarily follow that the lessees will thereupon be ousted, because it may so happen that they will be themselves the highest or the only bidders for the freehold, or for a renewal of the right of occupancy; but it must follow that the right, whether of freehold or of occupancy, will be put up to public competition, and be disposed of to the highest bidder. The lapsed lease will place the squatter on a footing of perfect equality with his fellow-colonists. He will be as free as any of them, but any of them will be as free as he, to bid for the resumed property of the State. He will have a fair field, but no favour. If he be able and willing to pay to the State a higher price than shall be offered by others, on that ground, and on that ground alone, the State will make over to him the object of competition; but if others offer a price which he is either unable or unwilling to pay down, the State can have no alternative but to make over to others what it would else have made over to him. The runs which fourteen years have endeared to his habits and his affections, must slip from his possession, and become the heritage of strangers.

But the knotty point to be disposed of by the General Assembly will be, at what mininum price ought pastoral lands to be open for sale? The squatters contend that, as a general rule with regard to lands of that description, there is no attainable price sufficiently high to induce the State to sell, or sufficiently low to induce the grazier to buy. It might, for example, be worth the grazier's while to purchase at the rate of a farthing per acre, while it would not be politic in the State to alienate the fee at a price so insignificant. To this point we shall turn our attention at some future opportunity.

[The gaol delivery was originally fixed for Wednesday, but the appointment was changed to Monday by a subsequent order of the Judges.]

SUPREME COURT.

TUESDAY.

BEFORE His Honor the PRIMARY JUDGE in Equity.

SMART v. HUGHES.

His HONOR delivered judgment herein in favour of the plaintiff. The judgment will be given at length in to-morrow's impression.

HORSLEY AND OTHERS v. HYLAND AND ANOTHER.

Mr. BROADHURST moved ex parte herein for an injunction to restrain the defendants, executrix and executor of the will of one Owen Bowen, father of the plaintiffs, from selling certain trust property. It was alleged that Hyland, who was the acting executor, was about to sell privately certain of the trust property, contrary to the trust of the will.

His HONOR granted the injunction.

IN THE MATTER OF MARTHA PARROTT, AN INFANT.

This was a petitioner on behalf of the above infant, praying that the Court would appoint a guardian unto her. It appeared that the infant was fourteen years of age, that she was entitled to the annual income of about £70 per annum, that she was apprenticed to a Mrs. Harrison, to learn the art of millinery, &c., and that her father had ill-treated her, forcing her to run from home.

Mr. DONNELLY appeared in support of the petitioner, and prayed that the Court would appoint the husband of Mrs. Harrison her guardian, without the usual reference to the Master.

Mr. BROADHURST appeared for the father of the infant, and admitted that perhaps his client under the circumstances would not be considered a proper person to be guardian; but still he would object to the Court appointing any one without the usual reference to the Master.

His HONOR said, in that event, seeing also that the father would not be a proper guardian, he could only order the usual reference.

HARPUR v. CHANCE.

Mr. BROADHURST said, that this matter had been referred to arbitration.

DUNCAN BEATSON v. J. T. HUGHES, ESTHER HUGHES, AND HER TRUSTEES.

This bill was filed by the plaintiff to get paid out of the separate estate of Mrs. Hughes the two following sums—£80 and £80. The first was due by virtue of a promissory note made by Mrs. Hughes, and dated in July, 1844; and the other was alleged to be due by virtue of an agreement also dated July, 1844. This agreement was signed by Mrs. Hughes, she at the time thinking that the stock in question were part of her separate estate, whereas it afterwards turned out that they had been assigned over to Eales and H. Hughes, in trust for her children. By the agreement, she agreed to pay £80 per annum to the plaintiff and his brothers, for managing the Albion Park property and the stock running there; the plaintiff was to be held accountable for all the stock. Under this agreement the plaintiff had the management for one year, and for which he claimed £80. It appears afterwards—some disagreement taking place between the plaintiff and Mrs. Hughes—the following agreement was made and entered into between the plaintiff on the one part, and Eales and H. Hughes on the other, by their attorney, E. J. Cory. The plaintiff on his part undertook to give up at once possession of part of the property, and to make certain returns within twenty days of the date of the agreement (14th April, 1845). Messrs. Eales and Hughes, then, in consideration of the above, undertook to pay the plaintiff £115, being the amount of wages then due from them, the said sum to be secured in the mean time by Mrs. Terry's check in favour of Mr. Cory, and endorsed by him to Mr. M'Laren, which was to be held by the latter until the plaintiff performed the conditions as above, and upon performance thereof it was to be delivered up to him. Mr. M'Laren endorsed on the agreement that he had received the check in question. The defendants in their defence set up and relied upon the last agreement, and further contended, that the plaintiff, by his gross misconduct, had forfeited all claim to wages

Mr. DONNELLY appeared in support of the bill, and contended that for aught that appeared in the answers the plaintiff ought to succeed. The general proposition that the wife's separate estate would be liable under the circumstances, would not be denied. The only question was, did the agreement dated the 15th April, 1845, deprive the plaintiff of his equity? he submitted not. That agreement was not under seal; it was void for want of a consideration, the only consideration being wages, which by the very agreement itself were admitted to be then due. It was not shown that the check had been received by the plaintiff, nor did the plaintiff by the agreement agree to forego any claim he might have against the separate estate of Mrs Hughes. The agreement at the utmost was a mere voluntary offer of third parties to pay a debt on certain conditions on behalf of Mrs. Hughes, between whom no connection was shown. Other objections were also taken to the instrument, on the ground that it did not appear that Mr. Cory was authorised to enter into it on behalf of the trustees.

Mr. LOWE appeared for the defendants, and submitted that the agreement relied upon, independent of the plaintiff's misconduct, as proved in evidence, was a good answer to the bill. He submitted that, in deciding the question raised by the bill, his Honor would look to this agreement, and, when doing so, it would appear that the plaintiff, though he was seeking equity, had not done equity. The disputes between the plaintiff and Mrs. Hughes had been adjusted very fairly; she, on her part, through the trustees, acknowledged the debt of £115, and which was agreed to be paid, provided the plaintiff would perform certain conditions: these were most equitable in their nature. He had refused to do so, and ought not, therefore, to succeed in a Court of Equity, but ought to be left to his common law remedy. At any rate, when coming into equity he ought to show his readiness and willingness to furnish all proper accounts.

Mr. DONNELLY replied.

His HONOR said, he considered the agreement relied on by the defendants ought not to prevent the plaintiff from recovering in a Court of Equity. The mere non-performance on the part of the plaintiff of the conditions specified in that agreement ought certainly not to prevent him from getting paid by her who was primarily liable. His Honor then ordered the usual reference.

SYDNEY FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY.

THE fifth annual meeting of the members of the Sydney Fire Insurance Company was held yesterday, at the Company's Offices, Pitt-street, Mr. T. W. Smart in the Chair, when the following report was read:—

REPORT.

In submitting their Fifth Annual Report, the Directors have the satisfaction of again assuring the members of the Sydney Fire Insurance Company of the increased stability and prosperity of this association. To the members as well as to the Directors, it must be a subject of sincere congratulation, that the first five years since the establishment of this Company have passed without any calls being made upon the funds for losses by fire, and that a total exemption from casualties, the occurrence of which at an earlier period (while the whole undertaking might be called an experiment of principles before untried in this colony) might have proved fatal to its progress, has enabled the Directors to lay the foundation of an institution, which they can now confidently say will be beneficial to the assured and to the colony at large.

In referring to the accounts and books laid upon the table, which have been audited by Mr. A. Campbell, accountant, the Directors have much pleasure in contrasting their present with their position at the first annual meeting, in November, 1845. The amount of property now insured is £284,880—the liability of members under the mutual clause, £9104 15s. 4d.—the funds of the Company in Government debentures and cash amount to £5682 12s. 8d.; whereas the amount insured in November, 1845, was £76,500—the liability, £2699 7s.—and the funds of the Company only £565 6s. 4d.

These facts led the Directors to the conclusion that the moral risk on the plea of which the English offices used to charge 1½ to 2 guineas per cent. for good first class buildings does not exist, and led to a gradual reduction of rates on their part, in which the English offices were obliged to follow; and those insurances for which the colonial public had to pay 1½ and 2 guineas per cent. are now reduced to 10s. per cent. In this respect this institution is therefore entitled to the thanks of those persons even who have been obliged to insure in other offices, and while the Directors have hereby effected a saving to individuals, they have been the means of retaining in the colony thousands of pounds, which would have swelled the amount already drained from its coffers in the shape of dividends and interest on mortgages. Convinced, however, that the expense of insuring was susceptible of still further reduction, the Directors, after a revision of rates, and taking the opinion of the members at a meeting especially called for that purpose, had the satisfaction of finding their recommendation of a return of fifty per cent. of the premiums upon the renewal of all annual policies, unanimously responded to. Fresh policies in terms of the new contract are consequently being issued to the members, as their respective periods of renewal come round, and while by these means the expense of insuring is virtually reduced to half the present rates, the members have the satisfaction of knowing that the security is unimpaired.

The principal object, however, which the Directors have always had in view, and which has led to the periodical reductions referred to, has been to bring the important subject of insurance against fire, more prominently before the public, in fact, to make Fire Insurance what it is in the mother country, universal, and not the exception, as has been the case in this colony, where the very rare occurrence of fires has engendered a degree of indifference much to be regretted.

It must, however, be obvious to the members that to attain this object, the Directors require their co-operation, and they are convinced that this co-operation will be readily accorded to them, when the vast importance of the subject and the comprehensiveness of their plan of operations is fully understood.

A document, recently issued by the City Council, declared the rental of the rateable property in Sydney to be 252,000 per annum; and there is besides this a large amount of property not rateable. The Directors feel, therefore, that they are within bounds in assuming the value of the household property in the City of Sydney and its environs to be two millions pounds sterling, and that there is a similar amount of chattel property insurable. Reducing the average of the present rates of premium to 5s. per cent, with a return of fifty per cent. upon renewal, (therefore virtually reducing the rates to 2s. 6d. per cent.) the result would be without calculating interest, the accumulation of 50,000l. in ten years; a sum more than double the amount of losses by fire during the last ten years.

Independent of the fund in course of accumulation, the members would then have the security of four times the amount of the annual premiums, which, assuming the amount insured to be four millions, and the average rates 5s. per cent., would be equal to 40,000l.—a sum fully adequate to answer any demands that might be made upon it from any casualty short of a general conflagration, and which, from the number of persons who constitute the Company, would be collected in such small amounts from each as scarcely to be felt by any one. If, however, under a continuance of favourable auspices, such as have hitherto attended their operations, and with an increase of business, such as is contemplated in the foregoing remarks, the Directors should, in the course of ten years, accumulate such a capital as 50,000l., the liability of members under the mutual clause would become a mere nominal liability, retained for more abundant safety; and the cost of insurance would be nothing, because the whole amount of the annual premiums could be returned to the members on renewal of their policies.

To the members, the Directors feel that this Report must be satisfactory; but they wish particularly to draw the attention of the public to the fact, that this Company was not started, and is not maintained, as a speculation for the investment of funds. It is not a Joint Stock Company, where the interests of the assured and the assurers are in opposition to each other. It is an association for mutual protection.

The Company was started by a few persons, whose only desire was to provide for themselves and their fellow-citizens the means of insuring their property at a moderate rate, which they were then unable to do.

At the suggestion of one of the present Directors, who had seen the system worked in Europe, it was determined to try the mutual principle, which the Directors are confident is well adapted for a company of this description.

While they admit that a large amount of property is insured in the Company, the Directors feel that (making liberal allowances for what is insured in the English offices,) not more than one-fourth of the property in Sydney is covered by insurance.

This, as colonists, they deeply lament. No proprietor of buildings or prudent tradesman ought to be uninsured. Without any blame to himself, the most careful person, if uninsured, might find himself suddenly reduced from a situation of comfort to one of penury. By the outlay of a few pounds a year this result may be guarded against. It is a duty which every man owes to his family and his creditors to insure his property from risk by fire.

The Directors desire to impress these views on the members, feeling that if the large and respectable body of men who now belong to the Company will exert themselves to bring the subject under the consideration of their neighbours and friends, the amount of property insured will very shortly be doubled: a result which is most desirable, not only as regards the interest of this Company, but of the utmost importance to the colony, socially and economically.

In conclusion the Directors beg to say that Messrs. T. W. Smart and Charles Kemp retire this year by rotation from the Direction, but are eligible for re-election.

The Report was unanimously adopted, the members expressing themselves highly pleased with the progress of the Company. Messrs. Smart and Kemp, the retiring Directors, were re-elected.

GENERAL REMARKS.

Tuesday, 30.—Morning, westerly airs and cloudy; fore and middle part, calms and fine sunny weather; after three, gentle north-east breezes, partially. Thunder clouds arose in north-west, and threatened for some hours, but sank back in the horizon. At sunset, calm and beautifully clear, and remained so all night.

Wednesday, 31.—Light south-westerly airs early—cirrus and cumulus forming; after eleven A.M., a somewhat brisk wind sprang up from north-west, and veered south-west and south before noon, and warm refreshing showers of rain fell; subsequently, air close and sultry for a while. After three o'clock, occasional thunder and dark clouds accumulated in west and north-west—light rain at times. After sunset, moderate breezes from south—ditty aspect and misty rains.

Thursday, 1.—Morning, fresh south wind, clouds and fog; middle and latter parts, light wind, sunny, but clouds of a threatening aspect hanging about; and, during the afternoon, collected in heavy nimbus, from which rain began to fall before sunset, and continued steadily till about eight o'clock; distant thunder at intervals. After ten o'clock, fair, and moderate wind from west of south.

Friday, 2.—Fresh gusty wind from south and by west, and alternate cloudy and sunshine, forenoon; continued strong breezes from south all day. At one o'clock, clouds gathered in dirtily, with rain. After four o'clock, particularly low murky nimbus came dragging their huge weighty bodies all around, from the westward to north-west, and discharged some very heavy rain for several hours. Evening, wind more moderate, little rain after half-past eight, but clouds hung very low and dark in south-west and west. Shortly after the moon rose, the two extremities of a lunar rainbow were presented to us in much beauty; in the southern limb particularly, all the rainbow tints appeared with distinctness, but delicately soft and subdued. The beauty was here enhanced by their being relieved by a black cloud. The phenomenon lasted above an hour.

Saturday, 3.—Morning, light south-west breezes, small rain at intervals, seven to nine; then cleared up, and weather remained fair and pleasant; although some threatening clouds appeared in the south-west at eleven o'clock, they fell back in the horizon. Night, clear; a very heavy dew.

Sunday, 4—Calm morning; stratus and fog till about eight o'clock; afterward, warm summer weather, light north-east airs and calms; partial cumulus and small nimbus in various quarters, and after four o'clock some distant thunder. Night, light airs, and generally clouded.

Monday, 5.—Morning, calm; scattered cumulus and isolated nimbus, and some trifling drops of rain between seven and eight o'clock. Bright delightful weather for most part, although during the afternoon partial cumulus and nimbus kept rising in the western sky; latter part, blew pretty fresh from north-ward. Night, clear sky and moderate breezes.

STEALING FROM A CART.—About nine o'clock on Monday evening, a female named Parsons was given into the custody of the police, for stealing from a cart one basket containing three parcels, of the value of about five shillings. It appeared from the evidence taken yesterday at the Police Office, that James Bryan, a porter in the employ of Campbell and Co., of George-street, grocers, was delivering some goods at a house in Clarence-street, leaving the cart standing at the door; on his return to the cart he missed a basket containing several parcels, and on making inquiry, he was told by a little girl named Wilson, that she saw a woman take a basket and go down some place off the street; she went with Bryan, showed him the prisoner, who denied all knowledge of the basket, and invited him to search the house; this Bryan declined, but fetched police constable Ekins, who, having searched the house without effect, was on the point of taking the woman away to the watch-house without the basket, when he bethought of searching the water-closet, where he found the basket and its contents. The prisoner denied having taken the basket, or having any knowledge of it whatever. She was remanded for the evidence of Mr. Campbell.

O'Reilly.—Also, Catherine Haney, for stealing a piece of Californian gold, of the value of 20s., from a Tahitian named Nativa, while at her house, on Sunday last. CAUTION TO CABMEN.—A cabman named M'Caffery was on Monday sentenced by Mr. Gilchrist to pay a fine of £10, with costs, or in default of payment to be imprisoned for six weeks, for having, on Sunday afternoon, while in a state of intoxication, furiously driven his horses about the city, to the affright and danger of other passengers. The defendant having pleaded guilty to the charge, the particulars were not given in evidence, but his conduct is described by those who witnessed it as having been of the most violent and outrageous description, such as would fully warrant the Inspector in taking measures for the abrogation of his license; at least it ought to present a sufficient bar to its renewal.

BATHURST.

QUARTER SESSIONS.

THE sittings of this Court were [...] on Thursday, the 1st instant, by [the] chairman, S. Raymond, Esq., [...] during the day by Messrs. D. M. Irving, J. [...] Morisset, E. Park, and G. Rankin, [...] The only barristers present were the chai[rman] and Crown Prosecutor; Attorneys—M[essrs.] Bligh, Home, Stephen, and Wadeson. At [the] opening of the Court, Mr. Bligh made appli[ca]tion that the trial of William Gray, who [had] been committed by the Carcoar Bench, [on a] charge of stealing and receiving a saddle, [the] property of Patrick Mernan—founding the [ap]plication on an affidavit of the defendant, [to] the effect that in consequence of the absence [of] a material witness, he was unprepared to g[o to] trial. To this the Crown Prosecutor obje[cted] that the affidavit did not go the length to s[how] exertion had been made to procure the atte[nd]ance of this very necessary witness. The [trial] was postponed, but at a subsequent period [of] the day called on for trial, and ably defe[nded] by Mr. Bligh. From the evidence it appe[ared] that on the 10th of June last, a saddle, the [pro]perty of the prosecutor, had been stolen [from] the residence of his brother, where it had [been] left; that in the August following, a [man] named Townsend called at this place, M[ount] Macquarie, with a horse and cart, on the la[tter] amongst other articles was a sadd[le,] which the prosecutor pounced on [and] claimed as his, both him and his two br[others] swearing hard and fast to it as his proper[ty;] their identity of it being a rent or tear in [the] seat, which the prosecutor said had be[en] caused by his spur when he was thrown o[ver] the head of a mare he was riding. On [the] saddle being produced in Court, however, [it] was very clear this could not have been [the] case, as the rent was not a ragged one, such [as] would have arisen from the rowel of a sp[ur,] but a plain gash, as if by a knife or some ot[her] sharp instrument. This case occupied [the] Court nearly three hours; ultimately [the] Jury, without a moment's hesitation, [re]turned a verdict of not guilty. [The] Chairman saying that the defendant left [the] Court without the shadow of a stain on [his] character, also observing that he had of[ten] seen him sitting as juryman in that Court, [and] hoped he should see him again resume [his] seat in that capacity.

HORSE STEALING.

John Smith was indicted for this offe[nce, and] pleaded guilty. He was at first remand[ed] for sentence, the Crown Prosecutor in[ti]mating that he had another sim[ilar] charge to prefer against him; this [he] did not however do, and the prisoner w[as] during the day brought up for sentence, which was, that he should be worked on th[e] roads or public works for five years.

LARCENY.

James Turner was indicted for stealing tw[o pairs of] old boots from the shop of Mr. J. T. O[...] William-street. This was a clear case, and th[e] prisoner was sentenced to six months' conf[ine]ment in Bathurst Gaol with hard labour.

Joe Frazer, a man of colour, was indicted f[or] stealing sundry articles, the property of M[r.] H. Rotton, of the Victoria Inn, in whose [em]ploy he had been engaged as cook. The c[ase] was clearly proved against him; the J[ury] without retiring, returned a verdict of guil[ty,] and he was sentenced to be worked in iron[s on] the roads or public works. From th[e] statement of the Chief Constable [it] appeared that this man was a prison[er] of the Crown illegallay at large, and f[or] whose apprehension a reward of £3 had be[en] offered.

Maurice Adams was indicted for stealing [a] pair of boots, the property of Mr. James S[...]saker. The prisoner had been seen lurk[ing] about the premises for some time previous [to] the boots being missing. Information w[as] given to the police; he was apprehended, a[nd] the stolen property found in his possession. Verdict, guilty,—to be worked on the roads [or] public works six months.

Charles Newell and Bridget M'Court we[re] indicted for stealing a quantity of wool, abo[ut] 150lbs, laid as the property of Major-Gen[eral] Stewart, or some person or persons unknown; [but] the evidence was defective, and both were dis[...]charged.

Ann Green was indicted for stealing a bab[y's] shirt, the property of James Cronan. [It] was a trumpery case; there was no proof of [the] stealing, and the shirt could not be po[sitively] sworn to. The prisoner was, therefore, [ac]quitted.

This closed the business of the day, and th[e] Court about 7 P.M. adjourned sine die.

THE WEATHER.—On Thursday, 1st inst., abo[ut] noon distant thunder was heard coming f[rom] the north-east; it soon passed the town [...] plains followed by rain that continued to [...] down in heavy torrents until 7 P.M. O[n the] following morning there was also heavy [...] The Vale Creek and River Macquarie [...] several feet. On Sunday, the 4th, abo[ut ...] another thunder storm, with heavy rain [for] near an hour. The season has been a [...] genial one, and from all quarters aroun[d we] hear the most flattering accounts as to the ap[...]pearance of the crops of grain and [...] has sprung up most abundantly.

FASHIONABLE ARRIVALS.—On Friday, the 2nd, the Honorable E. D. Thomson, Colo[nial] Secretary, accompanied by Captain Ek[...] reached Bathurst, and put up at the [...] hotel, (kept by Mrs. Black), where they [re]mained the night; the following m[orning] starting early for Coombing, the resi[dence] of Thomas Icely, Esq., M.C., where we [hear they] intend remaining a fortnight.

ACCIDENT.—On Saturday last, as a man wa[s] driving a bread cart of Mr. Wildis over th[e ...]

Macquarie River, which was then much swollen from the recent rains, it was capsized and carried some distance down the river; it was with much difficulty that the cart and a valuable horse was got safely to land, the driver also escaping with a thorough ducking. The only ultimate damage was the escape of a few stray loaves to afford a feed for the fishes.

The Mails.—We are rejoiced to hear that Mr. Rotton is contractor for the conveyance of mails to these districts for the ensuing year; the regularity with which he has performed his task for the last two years has been a great convenience to the residents.

BERRIMA.

November 5.—We had an abundance of rain, which has been of infinite good to the crops and pastures. But although the quantity of rain which fell must have been great, it has not sufficed to fill the water holes, some of which do not appear to have benefitted at all. We suppose this is owing to the rain having fallen in gentle showers, and not in torrents as is sometimes the case here.

Mounted Police.—Orders have been received to remove all the mounted police who were stationed at Berrima, and hand over the barracks to the custody of the civil police force in this town (which by the way consists of one chief and one ordinary constable!) until the Government decide what will be done with the place. Some four years since a party of prisoners arrived in this town under the charge of a detachment of the mounted police, for the purpose of erecting this same barracks, fencing in land and otherwise forming a complete police station, all of which, no doubt, must have cost a considerable sum of money. And scarcely have the corps taken possession thereof, and acquired a knowledge of the district, when they are suddenly ordered away, and the peace and safety of the township and surrounding neighbourhood left to the protection of two constables, one of whom, being the chief, and filling the office of bailiff of the Small Debts' Court, is unavoidably compelled to be absent from the town one or more days in every week. And as the Legislative Council have decided to reduce the present police force at the end of the current year, what will become of the town should it so happen that the constable stationed here at present be one of the two who are to be reduced? How are the prisoners convicted at the Goulburn Assizes and Quarter Sessions to be escorted to their destination? In fact, how is it at all possible to keep the district in order? At present our magistrates are most indefatigable in their attendance at the Court House. But we doubt whether we can expect this of them next year, when they will not be possessed of the powers of conducting the business of the Court. For a district measuring in diameter upwards of forty-five miles, situated on the main thoroughfare to the southern country, encompassed on all sides by ranges of mountains and gullies, the known refuge of the greatest vagabonds that ever existed (such as Lynch and others), having, in addition to the local duties, to escort all prisoners from Picton to Goulburn, and from all the southern country to Picton, the Legislative Council have decided that three ordinary constables are sufficient! We should like to see the three ordinary men who are capable of doing this. But from our local knowledge of the district, and the innumerable calls that are made on the constabulary independently of their ordinary and regular duties, we know it is utterly impossible that any three men can effectually execute the task imposed on the police force of Berrima. And had the honorable member for the county made himself fully acquainted with the nature of these duties before the estimates were passed in Council, we feel satisfied he would have strenuously opposed the reduction which has been made.

ORIGINAL CORRESPONDENCE.

PRESBYTERIAN MARRIAGES.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

Gentlemen,—As I understand a reply to my letter on this subject will appear in to-morrow's Herald resting chiefly on the case of the Queen v. Willis, I venture to trouble you with one word more.

The following is an abridgment of this celebrated case from Harrison's Digest:—

A, a member of the Established Church in Ireland, went, accompanied by B, a Presbyterian, to the house of C, a regularly placed minister of the Presbyterians of the parish where C resided, and there entered into a present contract of marriage with the said B, the minister performing a religious ceremony between them according to the rites of the Presbyterian Church. A and B lived together for some time as man and wife. A afterwards, B being still alive, married another person in a parish church in England. Qu.—Whether the first contract, thus entered into, was sufficiently a marriage to support an indictment against A for bigamy? The Queen v. Willis, 10 Cl. and Fin., 534; 8 Jur. 717.

Lord Brougham, Lord Denman, and Lord Campbell, were of opinion that it was; the Lord Chancellor, Lord Cottenham, and Lord Abinger, were of opinion that it was not. The Lords being thus divided, the rule "semper presumitur pro negante" applied, and judgment was given for the defendant in error.—Harrison's Digest, 1844, p. 109.

Now I submit this case has no bearing on the validity of Presbyterian marriages in this colony; there being this essential difference between the case of Ireland and this colony, that here we have an Act of the local Legislature—not conferring validity on marriages previously celebrated, but declaring that the celebration has been valid—that is to say, (taking it for granted that Chief Justice Forbes was wrong in his construction of the common law, and he is supported by high authorities) the statute law of this colony has declared that for the purpose of the celebration of the marriage ceremony, a Presbyterian minister is a person in holy orders; and the fact that Catterall declined to amend by pleading the nullity of the marriage at common law, shows pretty clearly that the applicability to his case of the decision in the case of the Queen v. Willis was more than doubtful.

J. H. B.

Gentlemen,—Observing a very sensible letter in your paper of to-day on marriages without a written declaration, that one of the parties is a Presbyterian, I would, to the reasoning contained in it add, that the clause in question is this, "That I am a member of, or hold communion with, the Presbyterian Church of Scotland." This is one of the most absurd, defective, and deceptive declarations ever made by a legislative body. First, there is no Church in the world named the "Presbyterian Church of Scotland," and therefore the declaration is false in every instance. There is, indeed, the Established Church of Scotland, the Free Church, the Covenanting Church, and others, all in Scotland; but there is no Church designated the "Presbyterian Church of Scotland." The above Churches hold the standards of Presbyterian worship, but the clergyman who, without any other meaning attached to the words, by courtesy, which the Act does not appear to contemplate, should sign, or cause to be signed, such a declaration, by parties of all these communions, who may most justly require his aid in such matters, would be guilty of deception; and they who compel him to do so, would compel him to do a scandalous, deceitful, and disgraceful action.

Again, the terms "member of, or holding communion with," may imply, either that the "or" is copulative, or that it is disjunctive. If it means that the membership and communion are identical, it vouches for a positive falsehood in ninety cases out of every hundred, even in regard to good and respected men and women, who, in every relation as a minister, trust to him the meaning of the word communion as used by Scots men having a very different meaning from that term as used in England, and in the Act. The clause, therefore, is a nullity; professing an adherence to a Church which has no existence, not even by a legal fiction; and though it had existence, it neither tells us whether the membership and communion are the same; or whether they are distinct, or which is the object of the clause.

The Church of Scotland, since the Union, carries with it, into all British Colonies, coordinate rights and privileges with the Church of England, and the liberties of its members are not to be capriciously taken away by a bungling piece of legislation, which can apply to nothing and to no man. The history of the clause is another affair, and may be explained by and bye.

At the same time it comes within my own knowledge, that the spirit of the clause is for the sake of peace preserved by Presbyterian ministers, and that no minister would from principle marry two Roman Catholics, or two Episcopalians, except in very rare cases. Presbyterian ministers are quite content to exercise their spiritual duties among those of their people, for whom they can vouch, from Scotland, England, Ireland, America, India, South Africa, the Pacific Islands, and Australia, without encouraging falsehood and forgery, by professing to be members of a Church which has no existence except in an Act of Council, and that carries absurdity on its face, and tyranny in its right hand.

I am, yours,
J. M.

Gentlemen,—Your correspondent J. H. B. has, in his letter on the above subject, assumed (1st) that the decision in Catterall v. Catterall settles the point as to the validity of marriages in this colony by Presbyterian ministers, where the declaration required in such cases by the Colonial Act, 5th Wm. IV. No. 2 (section 2), is not taken; and (2ndly) that the dictum of Sir Francis Forbes in The King v. Maloney (decided on the 11th April, 1836), that "by the law of England the consent of two persons able to contract expressed in the words of present mutual acceptance, technically known by the name of Sponsalia per verba de præsenti, without the intervention of a priest, constituted an actual and valid marriage," is a correct exposition of the law of England on the subject of marriage, and that such "therefore, except so far as modified by subsequent colonial legislation, is the state of the law in this country."

Both these positions, I apprehend, are quite erroneous, and as what I cannot but consider the perversity of Dr. Lang and Dr. M'Garvie has, according to your correspondent, raised a question in which "the legitimacy of thousands of families in this territory" is involved. I conceive it is of great importance that the matter should be put in its true light, in order that a legislative enactment may be obtained, which shall satisfactorily settle the point.

The case of Catterall v. Catterall only decides that the non-compliance with the forms prescribed by the colonial Presbyterian Marriage Act does not render the marriage (if otherwise valid) void. The question whether such a marriage was or was not good at common law, was in no way decided; that question Dr. Lushington said expressly he would give the parties leave to raise if they thought proper "a question" which that learned Judge remarked was "more important than any which had ever occupied the attention of those Courts." And that "upon such a question he would not presume even to enter without the fullest argument at the bar." So far then from the question which is involved in the pending case of The Queen v. Roberts having been decided by "Catterall v. Catterall," the point was not even entered upon.

It has however been decided (since the case of Catterall v. Catterall) by the House of Lords (Regina v. Millis, 23rd February, and 29th March, 1844—7 Jurist, 911, 983—and 8, Jurist, 717) that in a case where "A and B entered into a present contract of marriage per verba de præsenti in Ireland in the House and in the presence of a placed and regular minister of the congregation of the Protestant Dissenters called Presbyterians. A was a member of the Established Church of England and Ireland, B was not a Roman Catholic, but either a member of the Established Church or a Protestant Dissenter. A religious ceremony of marriage was performed on the occasion by the said minister between the parties according to the usual form of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland. A and B, after the said contract and ceremony, cohabited and lived together for two years as man and wife. A afterwards, and while B was living, married C in England. That A was not indictable for bigamy."

The point had been so decided by the Court of Queen's Bench in Ireland, and the only law lords present when the question was decided in the House of Lords being equally divided, the decision appealed from was affirmed. Although the law lords were thus divided, the opinion of all the Judges of England (except Lord Denman) was that the marriage by the Presbyterian Minister in Ireland was void, on the ground that by the law of England no marriage can be valid, unless celebrated by a clergyman having episcopal orders. This case was afterwards acted upon by the Court of Exchequer (Cathcwood v. Caslon, 8 Jurist, 1076.) There can, therefore, be no question but that the dictum of Sir Francis Forbes, is clearly not the law of England.

The only question remaining is whether the Common Law of England (as declared in the above cases) is the Common Law of this colony. I conceive that it clearly is by virtue of the express words of the New South Wales Act, (9th Geo. IV., cap. 83, sec. 24) and as the above case of Regina v. Millis, was as to a marriage in Ireland, to which the Common Law of England was originally applied by a statutary enactment (Poyning's Laws) in the same way as it is applied here by the New South Wales Act. I apprehend that all marriages which are not made valid by virtue of some statute or Act of Council, and which are not celebrated by a clergyman in episcopal orders, are absolutely void.

Yours, &c.,

ENGLISH NEWS.

PARLIAMENTARY NEWS FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 7.

In the House of Lords on the 2nd July, a Bill was brought in for enabling householders to borrow money for drainage, &c., on entailed estates in England and Scotland.

In the House of Commons on the same day, Lord Palmerston declined laying on the table of the house, a copy of the instructions sent to the commissioners in China, but stated that there were no grounds for apprehending a rupture with the Chinese, whose government took no part in the anti-British demonstration of April last.

Mr. D'Israeli brought forward his motion for a committee of enquiry into the state of the nation. In the course of his speech, he declared that, in addition to the distress at home the colonies had ceased to hope. Mr. D'Israeli was supported by Mr. Baillie, Mr. Plumptre, Mr. Hamilton, the Earl of March, the Marquis of Granby, and Mr. Muntz, and was opposed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr Roebuck, Mr. Slaney, Mr. Hume, Sir Robert Peel, and Lord John Russell. The motion was finally rejected (after an adjourned debate) by a majority of 140, the numbers being, for the motion 156; against it, 296.

In the House of Commons, on the 3rd July, Mr. Feargus O'Connor brought forward a motion in favour of the Charter. The motion, "That this House, adopts the principles embodied in the People's Character—namely, Annual Elections, Universal Suffrage, Vote by Ballot, Equal Electoral Districts, no Property Qualification, and Payment of Members." The motion was supported by Mr. Sharman Crawford, Colonel Thompson, Mr George Thompson, Mr Fox, and Mr. Muntz; it was opposed by Mr. Hume, Mr. Campbell, and Lord John Russell, and finally rejected by a majority of 209, the numbers being, for the motion, 13; against it, 222.

The House adopted a motion, by 91 to 37, to appoint a Committee to enquire into the best means of preventing frauds in the sale of bread.

In the House of Commons, on the 4th July, the Bill for legalizing marriage with a deceased wife's sister was finally passed through Committee. An amendment, exempting Scotland and Ireland from the operation of the Bill, was rejected by 118 against 66.

In the House of Lords, on the 6th of July, Lord Brougham, in an able speech, set forth the inadequacy of the present system of Prison Discipline, and contended that the system of making prisons places of ease and recreation had failed at all points. His lordship stated that labour was the great preventive of crime. This, combined with proper training, would cure the existing evils. His lordship submitted a series of resolutions in accordance with his views, but on being assured that the question was under the consideration of the Government, he withdrew them.

In the House of Commons, on the 6th July, Mr. Hume enquired whether the present commotions in Hungary would not abrogate the treaty of Vienna. Lord John Russell, in reply, stated that the transactions of Austria and Russia would have no effect whatever on the rest of Europe.

FOREIGN NEWS.

(From the Birmingham Journal, July 7.)

Surrender of Rome.

Paris, Thursday Evening.—The Government has received a telegraphic despatch announcing the entrance of the French into Rome on the 2nd, and that they were received with acclamation by the people. The division of Garibaldi had been conducted to Civita Vecchia, where they would lay down their arms. Two divisions of the army would be lodged and maintained at the expense of the Roman Government. The Funds rose on the news 1 per cent.

At half-past four o'clock, the Minister of the Interior begged to be allowed to read the following communication relative to the expeditionary army of Italy:—"Head quarters of Santucci, July 2, ten o'clock a.m.—The General-in-Chief to the Minister of War.—The assault during the night of the 30th has produced the expected result. Overtures were made to us last evening by the Roman municipality. Our troops occupy the bastian No. 9. The gates of St. Parolo, Portesa, and St. Pancrazio have been opened to us, and measures are taking for the occupation of Rome, which will be effected with perfect order. The discipline of our soldiery is equal to their valour."

The reading of this dispatch produced a marked sensation.

The Occupation of Raab.

Rumoured Defeat of the Russians.

An official bulletin, announcing the taking of Raab by the Austrians was published at Vienna on the 30th ultimo. After abandoning Raab, the Hungarians retired towards Acs. Previous to the capture of the city, some of their forces had been defeated near Cronck and Szemere. The loss of the Magyars in killed and wounded at Raab is not stated, but nine hundred prisoners had been sent to Vienna. Thirty carts containing wounded had also reached that city. The Hungarians, it was supposed, would retire to the Theiss, and large bodies of their troops were marching in that direction. Some accounts, however, state that the Russians, under Paskewitsch, might be able to cut off their retreat.

From the south the intelligence is unfavourable to the Hungarians; Jellachich is said to have occupied Theresienstadt, defeating the Magyars near Szegedin, and to have captured eight of their vessels with eighteen guns, on the Danube.

The rumour is current in the Assembly that the Hungarians had obtained an immense advantage over the Russians, who were marching beyond Raab. It is said the Russians have lost 10,000 men.

Austria.

Capture of Raab.—News from Vienna is to June 29. The rumour which prevailed on the 28th ultimo of the occupation of Raab by the Austro-Russian army, has been to-day confirmed by a telegraphic despatch received from the seat of war. The Austrian vanguard entered Raab at ten in the morning. There was no battle; only cannonading by the rear of the retreating Hungarian army. The Emperor, who rode at the head of the first army corps, entered at four in the afternoon into Raab, which is now the head quarters of the imperial army. The Hungarian head quarters are removed to Gonyo, which is nearly opposite Comorn. It is now become quite evident that the same system has been adopted both by Dembinski and Gorgey of declining a decisive battle. One obvious result of this plan is that the advancing armies from the north and west will be somewhat reduced in strength by the garrisons they will have to leave in their rear, and by the frequent posts they will have to establish to keep up communication through a hostile country with their base of operations. Gorgey, by declining a battle at Raab, and continuing his retreat towards Gran, will impose upon the Austro-Russian army the necessity of leaving some 20,000 men before Comorn. Nevertheless, Gorgey would never have abandoned Raab, except with the intention of detaching a portion of his force against Paskewitsch. The Weiner Zeitung contains a proclamation by Haynan, from head quarters at Altenburg, on the 26th, rousing the soldiers on the eve of battle to strain every nerve in the imperial cause. An ordinance regulating the pensions to be bestowed on the wounded, and displaying the rewards to be obtained by unflinching valour, is held out as an encouragement to fight with ardour.

THE FUNDS.

July 7.—The submission of Rome has had some effect upon the Money Market, but not so much as was anticipated. It is deemed good tidings in so far as it relieves the French Government from much excitement. The questionings and taunts of the French opposition very much annoyed the Ministers, and was beginning to tell on the public feeling. Any serious reverse might have set France in a blaze. The possibility of a conflict between the French and the Austrians about the return of the Pope, is a drawback upon the pleasure which the success of the French would otherwise have inspired. England and France are in accord upon the policy to be observed in requiring that the Pope shall grant free institutions to the Italian people. It can hardly be possible that Austria should dare the ill-will of both powers; and although England will not interfere by military means in the affairs of Italy, she will not oppose, but encourage France, to hold possession of Rome till a satisfactory solution of the difficulty shall have been attained. There is, therefore, no serious danger of war. The quarterly return of the Revenue showing a decrease of £300,000 in the Customs, and £450,000 in the Excise, was at first sight rather alarming; but the cause has been satisfactorily explained. The falling off in the excise has not arisen from a decreased consumption of articles subject to these duties; but from the payment of the hop duty having been deferred, and the change in the mode of charging the duty on spirits.

Metropolitan Charity Schools.—Yesterday, the anniversary meeting of the charity children of the metropolitan schools was held at St. Paul's Cathedral. This is justly regarded as the greatest exhibition of the kind in this country, and perhaps in the world, and, although the arrangements differ very little from year to year, the interest which it excites is always new, and the number of spectators assembled to witness it continually on the increase. It is the only spectacle which conveys an adequate idea of the unbounded charity constantly at work in the heart of this vast city, and no one can possibly be present on such occasions without experiencing a feeling of honest pride at the results which have been achieved by the enlightened benevolence of our fellow-citizens. At the ordinary charity festivals held during the season, the children who are supported by the contributions of those present are sometimes introduced, and their appearance has a natural tendency to stimulate the sympathies of the beholders, but their numbers are necessarily circumscribed, and they fail completely to convey any impressions greater than those which are involved in the merits of the institution with which they are immediately connected. But it is not so with the exhibition which according to annual custom took place at St. Paul's yesterday, and which rises to the dignity of a national spectacle. It is seldom in modern times that the vast extent of our cathedral can be made available for the accommodation of large masses of the people assembled for a sacred purpose, and their "long-drawn aisles" generally present to the beholder the same aspect of solitary and deserted grandeur. But yesterday, within the immense space from the organ loft to the western entrance of St. Paul's there could not have been less than from 15,000 to 16,000 human beings assembled. The seats in the centre aisle had, by a new and very judicious arrangement, been slightly raised in tiers in the centre of the transept, while those for the children were in the usual circular form, divisions being set apart for each school, and the whole rising from the basement more than half way up the huge pillars upon which the dome is supported. Within the space thus enclosed, pews had been erected for the élite of the visitors, and here also was placed the pulpit for the preacher of the charity sermon. This outline of the arrangements will give some idea of the spectacle which the interior of the cathedral presented when, at twelve o'clock, the service commenced. A person standing in the centre of the transept saw immediately about him a distinguished assemblage, among them the Marquis of Westminster and his son, Lord and Lady Ruthven, two daughters of the Duke of Sutherland, the Right Hon. Mr. and the Hon. Mrs. Fox Maule, Lord and Lady Charles Russell, the family of the Prussian Ambassador, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs, in their robes of state, many of the clergy in their robes, and the Bishop of Oxford, the preacher of the charity sermon. Hemming in this assemblage, like the wall of an amphitheatre, were placed the children of the different charity schools in the metropolis, to the number of 5000 and upwards, a vast and shining throng, ranged in compact and symmetrical array, and presenting a solid mass of health, cleanliness, and youth, which it was impossible to survey without emotion. The girls, decked out in all the varieties of costume peculiar to the eleemosynary institutions of England, occupied the lower seats in the ascending series, their snow-white caps and aprons coquettishly contrasting with ribbands, gloves, and frocks of every hue and colour in the rainbow. Those belonging to each school were of course dressed exactly alike, and, being grouped together, anything like a motley effect was avoided. Above, and as it were occupying the mountain, sat the boys—their more sombre-looking garments relieved by buttons that glistened and twinkled with every movement of their bodies, and by rosettes which in size and brilliancy would have done honour to any festival. Each section was guarded above and below by its own masters and mistresses—their awful presence securing silence and order. Looking eastward the organ loft was seen as if at the end of a deep valley or pass, the sloping sides of which swarmed with "Charitable Grinders," while the huge instrument itself seemed to rest upon a wedge, of which the choir, with its seventy voices, was the upper part, while a bevy of little girls, looking beautifully clean and cool, in the distance, formed the apex. The view westward completed the scene, and the effect of it may be fairly conceived when we say that the whole space to the entrance was densely crowded with spectators, who appeared to fill the cathedral like a tide. The service was performed with the usual solemnity and effect, the children singing the parts allotted to them with more than ordinary precision. There have been no rehearsals this year, in consequence of the obstinacy of the vergers, who insisted on exacting their fee from all who wished to be present. That the festival, therefore, should have gone off so well in this respect is the more creditable to Mr. Bates, who occupied his accustomed crow's-nest position, and acted as conductor to the children in singing. The gentlemen of the choir also exerted themselves to the utmost, and the whole service was performed in a manner the most impressive. It is quite impossible to appreciate, without having heard it, the thrilling effect produced by the voices of 5000 children joined in the music of the church. There is an expression of pathos in the immense volume of sound rising from their lips, which, although he can scarcely tell why, stirs the heart of the listener to its core. The Bishop of Oxford preached an eloquent sermon from the text, "Ye are the light of the world," and exhorted his hearers to do all that in them lay towards reviving in the world the light of Divine truth, which had been withdrawn from man at the fall. The collection made at the doors of the cathedral exceeded that of last year by £150, and amounted in all to upwards of £700. It would be unjust to close this notice without complimenting Mr. Fisher and Mr. Gilpin, the honorary treasurers, upon the admirable character of the arrangements made by them on the occasion.—Times, June 8.

POWER'S SKETCHES IN NEW ZEALAND.

(From the Spectator.)

Mr. Power appears to belong to that important branch of the service which provides the comestibles of the Army, and keeps up the courage of heroes by catering for their carnal appetites. After serving in China and at Sydney, he was ordered to New Zealand; and arrived during the war which Governor Grey had to wage against the aborigines in the southern part of the Northern Island. Here he knocked about for a couple of years, sometimes in one new settlement, sometimes in another; often actively employed in following the enemy, now and then enjoying himself at Wellington. Of what he saw, underwent, and did, he occasionally kept a journal; of which his volume consists, with the addition of a voyage home by way of Sydney, the Indian Archipelago, and Calcutta, and thence by the overland steam route through Egypt.

Mr. Power is a rapid and rather graphic describer in a rough and ready way. His sketches give a good idea of the discomforts of a campaign in New Zealand; the evils which war inflicts upon the colonists in small settlements; the external appearance of the chief towns, and what travelling is through a country in a state of nature. When the more complex subject of man is in question, the Deputy-Assistant-Commissary-General is not so successful: he sketches looks, dress or undress, behaviour, and brawling: "the manners and the mind" are too much for him. The book is pleasant, but superficial, with the predominance of perhaps a professional sense of creature comforts. This was his first taste of actual service in the country.

On landing at Porirus, we found to our great surprise, that the whole of the soldiers had returned from the Horokiwi Valley. There had been no fighting since the skirmish in which Ensign Blackburne was killed; in fact, owing to the dreadful weather and the impenetrable nature of the country, nothing more had been attempted except to throw some shells into the enemy's intrenchment, and which had no effect. The camp is a miserable place, in the midst of sand-hills on the sea-shore, and completely exposed to the violent gales which are very frequent at this season. There is a slight stockade round the small reed huts, in which officers and men live, without chairs and tables, and with only a couple of blankets for a bed: this in a dry climate might be well enough, but here, where it has poured incessantly for six weeks, it is no joke.

It was a startling change for me, so recently from the luxurious habits of China and the comforts of Sydney and of the Castor, to find myself left on the shore in such a place, a stranger in a strange land, and unprepared to fall into the habits of my companions, exposed to rain and wind, with coarse fare and coarser lodging, my clothing ill adapted to the climate, and altogether inexperienced in the scrambling state of society where the rule appears to be "every man for himself and God for us all." It was a most uncomfortable though not an unexciting scene, from the constant arrivals and departures, rumours of war, alarming reports, the anxiety for news from the outposts, the numerous shifts and resources to employ time and extract amusement from such limited resources, and the ingenuity required to supply the commonest wants. In the evening, thirty-six of us sat down to dinner, consisting of native beef, biscuit, and rum. Our utensils were tin and pewter plates and tin cups, which latter served alternately to contain the soup, the grog, and the coffee. He was a lucky man who had knife, fork, and spoon; very few had all three, some none at all; and these last fared badly in the general scramble, and met with but little pity or assistance from their more fortunate neighbours.

What with railways, turnpikes, county-rates, and the competition of caterers for the public, the British people have almost forgot the taste of trouble in their locomotion, or what nature is in an unimproved state. The following passages give an idea of what Britain once was and the difficulties that Governor Grey had to encounter in his operations.

This is the worst country I ever saw for field operations. The forest is so thick as to be almost impenetrable: it is everywhere a mass of evergreen trees and shrubs matted and twined together with supple-jacks, creepers, and wild vines. In the whole district there is not one single road, and the tracks by which communication is kept up between the different posts are scarcely broad enough for one man to pass; they are everywhere obstructed by roots, fallen trees, and gullies, and are generally knee-deep in mud. The whole of the country in this neighbourhood appears to be a succession of precipitous hills, and deep, dark, boggy ravines, covered everywhere with a vegetation more dense even than a tropical jungle. * * *

We have, for the first time since I landed in New Zealand, had three successive days of fine weather; and I must say, that when it is fine it is the most delicious and invigorating climate that I know. I set out this morning on horseback for Wellington, over the most execrable road that ever was seen: a day's steeple-chasing would not give one so much trouble or more risk of falls. Within the two first miles I nearly lost my horse in a quicksand, and had to dismount to pull him out: for ten miles farther there was scarcely any footing; and it was a succession of plunges, jumping, slipping, stumbling, and falling among interlaced roots, fallen trees, deep holes, bogs, streams, and gullies. Several times I pulled up, believing it impossible for a quadruped to get over some of the places; but, on seeing tracks on the other side, I put my horse at it, believing that what had been done once might be done again; besides,

"Should I wade no more,
Returning is as tedious as go o'er."

The last few miles are by a narrow and broken path at the edge of a precipice, with a mountain stream leaping and brawling at the bottom. In spite of the difficulties, I enjoyed my ride exceedingly: thanks to the fine weather, the beauty of the forest, and the exhilarating songs of the birds.

This state of things, in the Wellington district and on the leading lines of route, did not last long. The great improvement in the settlements, both as regards the country and the natives, in the course of two years, is one of the most marked points in Mr. Power's book. We have just seen the condition of the road between Porirua and Wellington; let us take another look at it twenty months afterwards.

The following morning I got a horse, and on it sped in quickly and comfortably to Wellington. The whole of this once dreadful road is now a fine highway, and as I cantered along I could scarcely believe that it was the same ground that I toiled along so slowly and painfully less than two years ago. Gardens, cottages, and cultivations, are seen springing up on all sides: large patches of cleared land are making deep inroads into the forest, and the whole aspect of the country is being rapidly changed. I did not find the town of Wellington much altered; but it is a pleasant place enough, and at any rate, the inhabitants cannot be charged with inhospitality, for dinner parties, dances and soirées, succeeded one another daily. The polka, cellarius, and valse à deux temps, have already found their way to the Antipodes, and are danced to some purpose, as the Wellington balls rarely break up till after daylight; and to "go home with the girls in the morning" is generally part of one's duty.

There are some delightful rides and walks now about Wellington, and there is every prospect of its becoming as pleasant a residence as one could wish for. A new race-course has been laid out about three miles from the town, where the sport promises to be very creditable, as there are plenty of good imported horses; and there is also some fine thoroughbred stock bred in this country, particularly by the Honorable Mr. Petre, on his farm in the Hutt Valley, and which in the course of another year or two will be able to take a conspicuous place on the New Zealand turf.

I rode one day a distance of twenty miles up the Hutt Valley, and through the Taita by the new road; the scenery was beautiful, and the road so good that I longed to see a four-horse coach plying along it; a sight that in another year or two will doubtless be common enough. The road will connect Wellington with the extensive plain of the Wairarapa, besides opening out the valley of the Hutt and other large tracts of valuable land, and will be the commencement of the grand North road which will one day connect the Northern and Southern settlements.

The usual consequences of the contact of the European with inferior races appear to be showing themselves in New Zealand; the Native population is said to be decreasing, through diseases arising from intemperance and other vices, or from change of habits. Should this finally turn out to be the case, and the New Zealanders waste away, it would seem to arise from some physical law, since no savage race ever exhibited so much aptitude for civilization. Labour is attended with no degradation, and they readily acquire a turn for barter and business. The roads have been chiefly made by the Natives; they breed pigs, raise crops, and engage in trade; while those who profess Christianity exhibit powers of combined and steady industry in the ecclesiastical edifices they erect. It would seem to be through this disposition to earn the rewards of industry that Governor Grey has been able to keep the peace.

There is a wonderful change in Otaki since I was here two years ago. It was then the limit of our pursuit after Rangihaeta, and I thought it the most savage and licentious place I had ever seen. The fortified pa has been deserted and allowed to go to ruin, and the quandam inhabitants have settled themselves in the midst of their cultivations. Their houses, neatly built, are in the midst of well-fenced gardens; and there is abundant proof of prosperity in the number of pigs, cattle, and horses feeding about—evidence of a thriving population, which give good promise of continued improvement. Several of the chiefs have accounts with the bank at Wellington, amounting in some instances to two or three hundred pounds. An officer on his way through Otaki to Wellington, a short time since, was much amused at being applied to by one of the chiefs for any spare money he had about him; the applicant stating that he would not trouble him, but that he had immediate necessity for the money, and would be obliged if he would take a check for the amount. The request was immediately complied with, to the infinite gratification of the Maori, who was delighted at being able to make a practical use of his credit.

The first house we paid a visit to was Tommy Rauperaha's: who was exceedingly shocked at being caught in a red blanket and slippers, and speedily reappeared, got up quite regardless of expense. He was vexed that we had not demanded his hospitality instead of going to the whaler's, which he evidently thought infra dig, and he insisted on our staying to breakfast, though he regretted "that his hens were not laying." While the breakfast was preparing, we took a stroll round the village to see the improvements; among which, and not the least, was Tommy Rauperaha's new house. It was built partly on an English and partly on a Maori plan; or rather, the architecture was Maori, with English windows, doors, and other comforts. * * * * * * *

While at Waikanahai, we called at the warre of a Maori, who, with an eye to business that does infinite credit to his judgment, has recently set up a public-house for entertaining the Maories belonging to working parties in the neighbourhood. A weekly ordinary is held on the Saturdays, after the week's work is done and paid for, and which is usually very well attended. He provides a dinner of pork, potatoes, bread, and coffee; for which he demands the moderate sum of one shilling a head. At first he gave every one as much as he could eat for this charge; but he soon found, to his cost, that his countrymen were not so easily to be dealt with; for most of them, by way of getting as much as possible for their shilling, made a point of eating nothing the whole day before; so that they came to the scratch as ravenous as wolves. He has now arranged to give every man two pounds of pork, as much of potatoes, and a pint of coffee with sugar; which may be fairly considered sufficient to satisfy any reasonable appetite, and is by no means a bad shilling's worth. The Maories are making such rapid strides in civilization, that I have no doubt we may shortly hear of their having public dinners to promote social and political objects, and when, under the influence of full stomachs and open hearts, great things may be expected from them. They have a very natural aptitude that way, as even in their aboriginal state they were much given to heavy feasting and long-winded speeches; and they only wanted the formalities of president and vice, commonplace toasts, noisy cheering, and the bill to pay, to complete a resemblance to similar entertainments in the most civilized society. In alluding to innovations and improvements, I must not forget to mention that a prospectus has been recently issued for the publication of a weekly newspaper in the Maori language, to contain all the news, scandal, and gossip of the colony, political, domestic, scientific, and literary.

In a sort of introductory sketch of the history of the colony, and by frequent digressions in the course of his narrative, Mr. Power discusses various topics in connexion with the colonization of New Zealand; but without throwing any new light upon the mischievous arts of the missionaries and land sharks, the blunders and follies of the first Governors, and the suspected jobbing of the officials. In his remarks on the haste with which the first settlers were sent out, before Colonel Wakefield was ready to receive them, he overlooks the fact that it was only this promptitude that preserved the islands to the British Crown. Of the benefits of New Zealand as a place of settlement his opinion is more favourable than much of his narrative would imply, unless it be borne in mind that the author saw the very worst state of things when he was campaigning about, and underwent difficulties from which even the earliest settlers of a district must be free unless involved in war. The climate is so healthy that medical men who emigrate find their occupation gone; and notwithstanding the drenching rains and the exposure of the troops, no one took cold. For the poor man who can get there, Mr. Power describes New Zealand as a paradise; wages high, provisions plentiful and cheap, and the climate capital: but perhaps his true opinion best appears in an incidental remark at Calcutta.

The heat was excessive; but in spite of it we managed to get about and see a great deal of the "city of palaces." It is certainly a fine city, and one feels proud to have such a metropolis in our Eastern dominions; but for my own part, I would rather live in a reed hut in the pleasant bracing climate of New Zealand, than call myself master of the finest mansion in the Maidan, with all the luxury and attendance befitting it.
